SPECIFIC CLASS INFORMATION

Selected Topics in Environmental Law

This course considers the landscape of environmental law alongside contemporary climate fiction (or “clifi”). We will read key environmental statutes and landmark cases together with novels, films, and short stories focused on climate change and environmental crises. We’ll question whether (and how) these fictional narratives of the environment can help us understand the merits and shortcomings of U.S. environmental law. Our focus will ultimately be on the stories environmental advocates tell—to juries, judges, legislatures, and the public—and the question of how these stories might facilitate or inhibit environmental justice. Finally, to illuminate the relationship between our two fields of inquiry, we will review some foundational scholarship in the area of law and literature.
